

I think that TCPA laws are too strict. I think that it infringes on free speech and right to conduct business. An example is if a company calls for an individual they do business with and a third party answers without even the company being able to ID themselves a third party requests TCPA and not even knowing who is on the other line the company must adhere to the request for TCPA, this is total ridiculous only the owner of the phone account or the person in which they are calling for should have the ability to TCPA and not be granted the right to TCPA until they know who is calling and why they are calling. I used to work in the telemarketing business for a good company and many times this has happened also working with a financial institution calling in regards to direct business a customer does just to report a problem and being asked to do TCPA. Not being in that line of work anymore I also receive those types of calls and if the rest of America was not so ignorant to the world around them they would realize why people were calling and once they found out if they wanted the calls to stop all they would have to do is ask, instead many of them just hang up the phone or lie to whoever is calling which just makes the situation worse and customers or consumers just continue to receive calls when the whole situation could have been averted the first time. Thank you for your time
